C-TPAT: What Every Security Executive Should Know

Breakout Session
Safety

Barry Brandman

President

Danbee Investigations

It's the ultimate nightmare scenario for today's supply chain security executive: Having your Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT) safeguards circumvented and unknowingly importing drugs, guns or even a weapon of mass destruction into the U.S. What exactly can you do to mitigate this risk? Combining over 35 years of global supply chain security experience and an in-depth knowledge of the C-TPAT program, Barry Brandman will discuss the components of a world-class supply chain security program, present case histories of importers who have had their C-TPAT certification suspended or even revoked, and share innovative strategies for effectively protecting shipments originating from high-risk countries like Mexico. Last but not least, he will be discussing some of the changes that may be taking place to the program in the near future.
